

* Parks Canada is the lead agency for the implementation of the World Heritage Convention in Canada due to its longstanding experience and depth of expertise in the conservation of both natural and cultural places. Twelve of Canada's twenty World Heritage sites are areas managed in part or in whole by Parks Canada.

* The United Nations declared 2019 the International Year of Indigenous Languages in order to raise global awareness about Indigenous peoples' cultural and linguistic rights.

* On June 21, 2019, the Indigenous Languages Act received Royal Assent. The Government of Canada will work with Indigenous representative organizations, Indigenous governments, and provinces and territories for its implementation. To support this implementation, Budget 2019 includes an investment of $333.7 million over five years, and $115.7 million annually thereafter.
